(The latest findings on the history and mysteries of the Fort Loudoun Well)

Mr. Stevan Resan

was born and grew up in Chicago. He earned a BS in Chemistry from the Illinois Institute of Technology and later a MS degree in Polymer Chemistry from Akron University. Steve has also done graduate study in Education and Business Administration. His early career was in research and development working as a plastics engineer and research manager at several Fortune 500 Companies. His second career was with the U. S. Patent Office where he served as Senior Primary Patent Examiner earning the Department of Commerce Bronze Medal and a citation from the American Intellectual Property Law Association "for his outstanding contribution to the integrity of Intellectual Property Law".

As a Patent Examiner he researched the history of innovations. After retiring in 2005, it was an easy transition to researching his lifelong interest in the Colonial Period. Steve now spends his time studying, speaking and writing about various aspects of life on the Virginia Colonial Frontier. He has visited most of the sites of major British and French Forts of the French and Indian War from Nova Scotia to Louisiana, as well as settler's forts and sites important to the Iroquois Confederacy.

Steve is Vice President of the French and Indian War Foundation and serves on its Board. He is a member of the Winchester Frederick County Historic Society, Fort Edwards Foundation and the Association of Living History and Farm Museums, First Person Interpreter's Network. He often portrays Col. James Wood, founder of Winchester. Steve lives on the old Braddock Road in Whitacre, Virginia.
